WASHINGTON TO DECIDE ON RRITAIN OR GERMANY.

Bisturbing Question Is Whether Gros Admiral Is Greater Than an Admiral of the Fleet-Steamboat Inspectors Will Keep Watch for Overcrowding.

The question of precedence among the foreign naval representatives at the Hudson-Fulton celebration is to be decided Washington. The main point at issue is whether Great Britain's or Germany's representative should have first honors. It was understood that the German Government expects it for Gross Admiral von Koester, retired, of the Imperial There was also a feeling in certain quarters that Great Britain, in sending over one of her admirals of the fleet, Bir Edward Hobart Seymour, had been sufficiently courteous to deserve special recognition

The problem was whether a Gross Admiral is greater than an Admiral of the Fleet, or vice versa, since both had been raised above the title of plain Admiral. So far as the commission is concerned, such matters are in the hands of the reception committees, of which Seth Low chairman. The treatment, of the foreign guests has also been in the hand of the State and Navy departments and when this problem in naval who's who arose, Mr. Low immediately got in com-of the question, and made several pointed remarks to Magistrate Butts. munication with Washington and absolved himself of the whole matter. The Washington authorities took it on their own shoulders willingly enough, apparently with the idea that it would be easier for them to keep things straight from the beginning than to try later to correct mistakes. Within a few days the list of official guests will be returned from Washington to the commission with the object of giving the public the fullest protection." from Washington to the commission in this city; and the officials of the commission say that it will be marked plainly.

If the rank of Gross Admiral and Admiral of the Fleet is equal, as on the face of things it appears to be, then the matter resolves itself into one of length of time of holding the rank, which is the universal rule when officers of the same or equal rank meet. So far as the question of plain figures is concerned Admiral Seymour has it on his German contemporary, having been made an Admiral of the Fleet on February 20, 1905, while Gross Admiral von Koester did not receive his present rank until December, 1906.

Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder, and he was retained in that capacity for the purposes of the celebration. Then there began to be unofficial talk about getting Admiral Dewey, now on the retired list, to take temporary command of the fleet, with the idea that he would be the senior officer present. Since he is the ranking officer of the entire United States navy it may be presumed that his seniority over the other officers at the celebration, particularly in point of view of his record and his long service as Admiral would not be questioned.

But the President has not asked Admiral Dewey to perform the service, and the Admiral says that even if the Government had evinced a desire for him to undertake the mission he would be compelled to decline, since he does not feel up to a week of festivities. If President Taft were to be here, of course as Commander in Chief of both army and navy he would be above even Gross Admirals and Admirals of the fleet; but he will be in the West. He will be represented at the celebration by Secretary of the Navy Meyer, who, however, is to be considered rather as a civil officer of high rank than as a naval officer. ould be above even Gross Admirals admirals of the fleet; but he will be a West. As soon and Mr. Curtiss's aeroplanes. As soon as he has put his mehine together again after its railroad trip Mr. Wright will begin trial flights. These trial flights will not be open to the public, as those in charge of the aeronautics programme of the celebration have deemed it best for everybody concerned to have the island fairly free of people during the time it takes to tune up the machines and get them in working order.

price for chartered steamboats is going up to what seems to be a new high record. Any one who has a boat big enough to carry about 1.500 passengers big enough to carry about 1,300 passengers can get almost any price he wants for her use during the naval parades. One investigator who had been prowling around the shipping offices downtown reported yesterday that the cheapest charter he had seen for a boat good for 1,500 passengers was $2,200 a day. This boat ordinarily can be chartered for $200 a day.

The high prices fever also has been passed on to the owners of landing stages, who are asking as high as five cents each passenger for the privilege of embarking or landing. This problem of landing places is going to be one of the stiff problems of the naval parade days, with the Battery especially heavily taxed.

At a conference between the Board of City Magistrates and Police Commissioner Baker, held at the Seventh district court yesterday afternoon, the question of safeguarding the city from pickpockets and crooks during the Hudson-Fulton celebration was discussed.

Commissioner Baker told the Magistrates that in order to properly protect the visitors and residents the police must be backed up by the courts. "Without your aid," said the Commissioner, "we can accomplish nothing." During the discussion Magistrate Butts stated emphatically that he would enter into no agreement with the Police Department. He said: partment. He said:

at the Manhattan Opera House. The double bill migrated from Fourteenth to Thirty-fourth street some time in the course of Thursday and emerged last night at the Manhattan Opera House. Its effect in one direction was much the same there as it had been at the elder (elder, not better) establishment. It drew forth crowds, and from the crowds drew forth many excited plaudits. The performance had the spirit to evoke the approval of the audience. It was not so successful in the matter of tone proection as some performances in the Manhattan have been, and it had a delightful uncertainty as to language, since the Santuzza was entirely French and the Turiddu generally French with Italian interludes. But it was a good perform ance for all that. Marguerite Sylva sang Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Nedda in "Pagliacci," the latter part, it was said, for the first time. It cannot be said that either part is perfectly suited to her voice. but she acquitted herself with credit. Her Santusza had temperament and dramatic sincerity to commend it, but her acting was not always well considered. It showed a want of proportion, so that some of her best points failed to pierce because they were surrounded by too many other minor points.

Mr. Lucas was a very solid looking Turiddu, and he sang his music tolerably well. But he was not at all magnetic and there really seemed to be no good tra were good, but Mr. Sturani's conducting of the opera left much to be desired.

In "Pagliacci" Miss Sylva's principal associates were Mr. Carasa as Cano and Mr. Laskin as Tonio. Mr. Carasa showed much taste in the quieter passages, but when he undertook to produce volume in his upper tones he failed to get any resonance, for the simple reason that the tones were not properly placed. Mr. Laskin's Tonio was just passable. But the audience apparently liked the per-

KEGERREIS'S PLAYLET STRONG. Well Acted Tale of Horror as Curtain Raiser to Comedy.

The audience at Daly's Theatre last night had a tense twenty minutes when Robert B. Kegerreis presented the playlet, "The Telltale Heart," which he wrote and gave as a curtain raiser to the comedy Billy

The playlet also was acted by Mr. Regerreis, for the three parts other than his own were of slight importance. As a servant, a lunatic who had killed his master, he had the only part that mattered. The detectives, who had been sent to the house by neighbors alarmed by noises, drew from the servant, whose mind crumbled under the strain, the story of the crime, of the master's heart that would not be stilled, and of the horrible cunning that had finally concealed the body.

It was well that this tale of horror was given before so pleasing a comedy as "Billy," otherwise the audience would bave gone home with a bad taste in its mouth, for Mr. Kegerreis's acting of his mouth, for Mr. Regerreis sacting of his unpleasant play was so uncommonly good that the effect of it was about as cherey as a personally conducted visit to a violent ward. It was well calculated to exhibit his ability as an actor, but it was exceedingly hard on the sensibilities of the audience.

McMackin to the Pastorate of St. Mary's Church, Rosebank, Staten Island.

Mgr. McMackin has been for several years one of the secretaries of the Archbishop and professor of Latin in the Cathedral College. He is one of the youngest priests in America in the rank of the monsignori and won his doctor's cap at Rome. Pope Pius X. appointed him American postulator of the inquiry looking to the canonization of Pius IX.

The Rev. Dr. William G. Hughes will succeed Mgr. McMackin has been for several years one of the secre cathedral parish, Mgr. Lavelle. Dr. Hughes until recently was secretary of the Apostolic Delegation at Washington, D. C. Dr. Tracy, who goes to St. Leo's, was one of the assistants of Bishop Cusack at St. Stephen's Church, which is only two or three blocks east of St. Leo's. It is one of the assistants of Bishop Cusack at St. Stephen's Church, which is only two or three blocks east of St. Leo's. It is not at all improbable that the two parishes will be eventually united, St. Stephen's absorbing the scant congregation of St. Leo's. Dr. Tracy's appointment, it is made known, is not permanent. No one in authority at the cathedral would say that St. Leo's would be abandoned, but it is no secret that the congregation cannot maintain the property, because there is little left of the original and aristocratio parish of St. Leo. According to those parish of St. Leo. According to those who should know, it was only out of courtesy to Father Ducey that it was not courtesy to Father Ducey that it was not absorbed several years ago.

Other appointments and changes made were: The Rev. William S. Prunty, an assistant at St. John Chrysostom's, The Bronx, to be pastor of the Church of the Presentation, Port Ewen; the Rev. Patrick H. Mackin, to be assistant at St. Veronica's; the Rev. Dr. Thomas Deegan, to be assistant at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, in East Fourteenth street; the Rev. Thomas J. McCormick, to be assistant at the Church of St. John the Evangelist; the Rev. James E. Kearney, 'to be assistant at St. Cecilia's:

PASSENGERS SEE A RESCUE.

Smart Work by Crette's Roat Crew in Picking Up Sailor Who Fell Overboard. When the White Star liner Cretic, in yesterday from the Mediterranean and the Azores, was nearing the port of Ponta Delgada, the largest town of the islands, on September 10, three sailors were ordered to lower the accommodation ladder to let some passengers land. The liner was under full way as the ladder was put outboard.

One of the sailors, Joachin Compodonio, missed his footing and tumbled into the sea. It was broad daylight and many passengers were on deck. The shippassengers were on deck. The ship-mates of the sailor who had gone over the side shouted, "Man overboard!" side shouted, "Man overboard!"

The cry was repeated by passenge and within a few minutes the liner was making sternway and a lifeboat was swung out on the davits. Compodonio was more than half a mile in the Cretic's wake when she was stopped. She was backing toward him as the boat struck the water and when the boat's crew got alongside of Compodonio and hauled him aboard the Cretic was so close that the oarsmen had little trouble making the side of the ship and getting hoisted aboard.

Life buoys had been thrown to Com-podonio within a minute after he had fallen overboard and he had caught one of them. He was unable to swim and was exhausted when his shipmates reached him.

The boat's crew, who had made the rescue within twenty-five minutes, were cheered by the passengers when they got back aboard the Cretic. The rescued sailor was too weak to stand without assistance and was in his bunk when the liner arrived at Quarantine yesterday morning. CURED BY SEA VOYAGE.

Man Who Left Russia With Eye Disease Passes Inspection at Kills Island. The sea is a mighty remedial agent, according to the surgeon of the Russian liner Estonia, recently in from Libau and Rotterdam. Leiba Ftaroselsny, a Russian who arrived by the Estonia, was pronounced unfit to sail aboard her by doctors in Libau. He had a ticket to this port prepaid by his son, Jacob Kloop, who decided to change his name after landing in America. The diagnosis of the Libau doctors was that Ftaroselsny, who may be excused for changing his name also, had a disease of the eyes that would debar him from landing here. They therefore ordered him detained at Libau. He smuggled himself aboard and was discovered by himself aboard and was discovered by officers of the ship after she was too far from port to land him. He showed his ticket, but the commander of the Estonia said that as he had been ordered to remain in the port of Libau by officials of the Russian Government his ticket would not be accepted and that he would be classified as a stowaway on the ship's manifest.

He was sent to Ellis Island as a stoward of the ship is the was sent to Ellis Island as a stoward of the ship's manifest.

He was sent to Ellis Island as a stow-away. The doctors there made a careful examination of him and said that there was nothing the matter with his eyes. The sea had apparently cured him of all

After it was found that he had a clear to be assistant at the CRurch of St. John the Evangelist; the Rev. James E. Kearney, to be assistant at St. Cecilia's; the Rev. M. J. Larkin, assistant at St. Gabriel's, to be assistant superintendent of schools.

Prince Kuni at the Hippodrome. Prince Kuni of Japan, accompanied by his Princess and a suite of sixteen persons, witnessed the performance at the Hipperforme last night. The Prince and his friends occupied several boxes, which were gayly decorated in honor of the imperial Japanese visitors. During one of the intermissions between the several spectacles which compose the Hippordrome entertainment the Prince and his party were escorted behind the scenes, and Stage Director R. H. Burnside explained to them some of the mechanism resources.

Justice Brewer made a strong plea for the preservation of lakes and streams from pollution by sewage and manufacturing wastes and declared that the American people were beginning to realize the importance of protecting the health of the community from this danger.
